Montgomery History Conference January 28, 2017

ADSW Founding President Among Presenters

Since 2007, the Montgomery County History Conference has been a venue for people of all ages and backgrounds-civic leaders, students, museum professionals and volunteers, history buffs, genealogists, and the general public-to explore and celebrate the many facets of our past that shape our community to this day. Hosted annually by Montgomery History, this day-long gathering includes workshops, presentations, and panel discussions covering a wide range of topics within the realm of local history.

This year's conference promises to be another can't-miss event with something for everyone. A personal story of a Montgomery County man's service in World War I will start the day, followed by breakout sessions featuring such varied topics as the architectural history of the Jewish community, the unique Warren Historic Site, Latino immigration, archaeological work at Oakley Cabin, and the pivotal election of 1962 and a retrospective of historic preservation efforts.

ADSW founding president Rick Striner will present "Twenty Years of Historic Preservation Work in Montgomery County, 1984-2004: A Reminiscence and Analysis."

"History Gems" will enable you to see distinctive artifacts from five local museums, while "History Tools" will provide you with the know-how to save a local burial site. The final session will be a special treat for Baby Boomers and music lovers of all ages with documentary clips and a panel discussion of the legendary radio station, WHFS 102.3 FM.

ADSW Salutes it's Super Models

On January 15, 2017, the Art Deco Society of Washington, in partnership with Montgomery History, presented a Roaring Twenties Fashion Show at the Historic Kentlands Mansion in Gaithersburg. We would like to express our appreciation to Amy Baker and the staff and management of Montgomery History for their extraordinary work in organizing the event.

Below we salute those who put together the show.
